About my interest in data and energy topics:

As a data enthusiast, I thrive on making data speak and uncovering insights through meticulous analysis and manipulation. I am passionate about bridging data with business needs to make complex information accessible and solve real-world problems. My goal is to leverage data to drive meaningful decisions and contribute to impactful business solutions.

I am also passionate about the energy sector, a field in which I have specialized through education and professional experiences. I firmly believe that data plays a pivotal role in the sector's success. Therefore, I am determined to advance my career in energy, focusing on advanced analytics topics, where I can bring my technical and business-oriented approach to drive value.

About my professional experience:

My past experiences in engineering, first as a project manager and then at ENGIE as a consultant in transformation and strategy, followed by a role as a Data and Business Analyst, have provided me with a versatile skill set. This allows me to be effective across a wide range of topics, both technical and business-related. I am able to handle complex issues and work efficiently with diverse stakeholders, all while delivering substantial added value.

About my mindset:

In my daily work, I always strive to bring qualities that I consider essential: a high standard of work, personal excellence, strong interpersonal skills, and the achievement of tangible results.
